

Scottish Government Files Become ‘Historical Records’
1 January 2009

The Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 applies to all public authorities. Under the Act a record of a public authority becomes a “historical record” at the end of a period of 30 years. The National Archives of Scotland holds a large number of Scottish Government and agency files which become “historical records” at the turn of each new calendar year.

From 1 January 2009, about 1,470 additional Scottish Government files can be viewed by the public without the need to submit a formal written FoI request. To assist researchers with accessing this new material therefore, we are publishing a list of those files which can be viewed without restriction in our West Search Room from 5 January.
